On 7 October, Kraków welcomed a group of delegates from the Massachusetts House of Representatives. The delegation met with Jakub Kosek, Chair of the Kraków City Council, and Stanisław Kracik, Acting Mayor of Kraków.

One of the main topics discussed was the potential for developing direct cooperation between Kraków and the Małopolska region and the state of Massachusetts, particularly in the fields of new technologies, science, education and business. The discussions also covered the energy transition, sustainable urban transport and innovation in healthcare.

The meeting also highlighted the importance of the historical and social ties between Poland and the United States. Several members of the delegation have Polish or Jewish roots, and for some, this was their first visit to Poland.

The delegation also visited JCC Kraków, the Czulent Association and the Marshal's Office of the Małopolska Region.
