2023-02-01

The Villa Decius Institute for Culture has welcomed its third SAR program grantee - Ukrainian-born philologist, translator, poet and literary critic, author of more than 300 scholarly publications, Olga Smolnytska, PhD.

In July 2020, IKWD, in cooperation with Jagiellonian University, launched the Scholars at Risk (SAR) International Network Residency Program. As part of the first two editions, Krakow hosted Prof. Candan Badem and Prof. Fulyia Atacan, both from Turkey, who, as a result of signing a public petition calling on the Turkish authorities to resume dialogue with factions in the southeastern part of the country, were accused of treason and removed from their universities and excluded from all public universities and government offices.

October saw the launch of the third edition of the program, within the framework of which, Olga Smolnytska, PhD., a Ukrainian philologist, translator, poet and lyricist who was forced to leave Ukraine due to the outbreak of war, will hold a residency in Krakow.

The acceptance of the new third SAR grantee was commented on by Dominika Kasprowicz, PhD, Professor of the Jagiellonian University, Director of the Villa Decius Institute for Culture: We are very pleased to have the opportunity to help the scientific community, especially in this year - the year of war in Ukraine, support for Ukrainian scholars and researchers who cannot continue their work is especially important. Olga Smolnytska, PhD., at Villa Decius will meet a multicultural and interdisciplinary group of writers, screenwriters, translators, artists, and I hope that this environment, on par with the university environment, will be welcoming and inspiring to her.

During her fellowship stay, Olga Smolnytska, PhD. will have the opportunity to continue her scientific work and establish cooperation with other researchers, not only from the Krakow university community. This aspect is emphasized by Prof. Beata Kowalska, Spokesperson for Academic Rights and Values (UJ representative at SAR):

Olga Smolnytska's academic resume is truly impressive. She is the author of more than 300 publications, winner of numerous literary prizes, and an acclaimed translator. Her works have been translated into Spanish, Portuguese, German and English. I firmly believe that her stay in Krakow will be intellectually fruitful not only for her, but for the university and the city.
